Return to Work Process - Worker

When returning to work after being a suspected or confirmed case of COVID-19, a worker must follow the following steps to ensure they are safe to return to work.

Workers must be assessed by a manager before returning to work.

1. Does the worker show a full range of individual symptoms in returning their work duties?
2. Does their return process not hinder individual or the business?

The following steps must be followed, in line with current public health advice in Ireland.

Any worker who has displayed symptoms consistent with COVID-19 must stay away from work, self-isolate and contact their GP by phone as part of the triage process.

They must also notify their manager / supervisor as soon as possible so that they can be supported in their return to work.

Any worker who is a confirmed case of COVID-19 will be contacted by the HR department to discuss their return to work. They will be supported in their return to work and will be provided with a return to work plan.

Confirmed cases must stay away from work for 10 days and self-isolate until they have been contacted by the HR department and have been cleared to return to work.

When a worker returns to work, they must follow the following steps:

1. Manager must assess the worker's symptoms and ensure they are safe to return to work.
2. If the worker has a fever, they must stay away from work for 10 days and self-isolate until they have been contacted by the HR department and have been cleared to return to work.
3. If the worker has a cough or shortness of breath, they must stay away from work for 10 days and self-isolate until they have been contacted by the HR department and have been cleared to return to work.
4. If the worker has a loss of taste or smell, they must stay away from work for 10 days and self-isolate until they have been contacted by the HR department and have been cleared to return to work.
